The establishment of newlines of steamers has always been the forerunner of the construction of submarine cables, and if the new cable should, notwithstanding anticipations to

JAPAN AND BIMETALLISM.

The following letter signed "J.H.G." appears in The Times:— this is an age of heresies, and the British public, so impatient of controversy where its cherished convictions are assailed, has neverthele's been reluctantly com elled to give a hearing to the advocates of bimetallism. Much has been said and much written on the subject in the last few months, and the recent action of the Government in raising the value of the rupes in ludia has added fuel to the fire. Earnestly as a solution of this burning question is to be desired in the interests of trade generally, there seems to be little hope of such a welcome result. for the two contending parties are not even agreed as to facts. Still, the discussion will not have been nufrnitful if it serves to snow the true proportions of the problem to be solved and the impossibility of arriving at sound generalisations without a due appreciation of the many minor issues involved. It is to one of these minor issues that I desire to call attention, and in thus trespassing on your space I shall endeavour to make my remarks as rick as possible.

Mr. Skrine, in his letter in your is ue of 2015 ult: which has reference more especially to the effect on Ceylon of the recent increase in the value of the rupee in India, alludes at the same time to the stimulus given to Indian productions by the depreciation of silver, or, as some would have it the appreciation of gold. What is true in the case of India is true elsewhere, where Asia is in question and silverusing countries. The same economic wave which has brought increased prosperity to Indian producers has benefited alike the Ceylon planter and the cultivators of tea, silk, and cereals, and the mineowners of China and Japan. And the contrury effect produced by the same cause on the seems to us the most remarkable feature of the importation of commodities from gold-using

But there is another side to the question. We instance, a case of spoons was invoiced from portune in so far as it draws attention to the relations of silver-using countries with each other
